Ben Gurion Airport police called Hayout in for questioning, but he was released after denying the allegations.

Despite Hayout's denial, police believe there is basis to the allegations. Hayout was instructed to stay away from the woman and police have advised the State Prosecution to file an indictment against the rabbi.

The prosecution is expected to hold a hearing on Hayout's case before stating its decision.

Advocate Uri Kenan spoke on behalf of Rabbi Hayout, saying: "Everything we have will be delivered in the prosecution's hearing. All I can say is that the rabbi denies any criminal offense."
