An unlicensed psychiatrist from Sands Point who was convicted Monday of raping one of his patients in 2012 (<http://patch.com/new-york/portwashington/sands-point-psychiatrist-faces-rape-charges>) may have tried to interfere with the jury, according to a report by Newsday (<http://www.newsday.com/long-island/crime/sands-point-doctor-convicted-of-rape-tried-to-infiltrate-jury-sources-say-1.11607122>).

Marshall Hubsher, 66, was found guilty of third-degree rape and third-degree criminal sex act in Nassau County Court.

In 2012, Hubsher reportedly engaged in sexual relations with a 32-year-old female patient during a treatment session for depression in his Flower Hill office.

Hubscher is also on trial for allegedly selling prescriptions for addictive drugs to patients for cash (<http://patch.com/new-york/greatneck/da-unlicensed-doctor-sands-point-sold-xanax-adderall-patients-cash>).

He also may face jury-tampering charges after a source told Newsday that Hubsher entered the Mineola courthouse holding papers, left without the papers and returned a short time later in a different outfit to attend his trial.

The Newsday report says notes found in jury rooms, which gave examples of reasonable doubt (such as a motive to lie, financial gain, mental illness and more,) were found shortly after Hubsher was seen on video footage leaving the courthouse without the papers. Patch reached out to a representative from the Nassau County District Attorney's Office who was unable to confirm if the reports were true. The representative was also unable to comment on whether or not a jury-tampering investigation was underway.
